Siti Fathiah Masre, affectionately called Fath, was born on July 29, 1985 in Johor Bahru, Malaysia. She completed her PhD in November 2015 at the University of Glasgow looking into ROCK2 activation in multistage squamous cell carcinoma. She currently works as a lecturer at the Centre of Health and Applied Sciences, National University of Malaysia (UKM). She teaches anatomy, histology and cytology. Her research interests are in the field of molecular mechanisms in cancer development and chemoprevention. Cytoskeleton regulation, cell-cell adhesion and tissue rigidity are also included in her research areas. On another note, Fathiah is an affiliate of the YSN-ASM and a lifetime member of MyBiomed Association.
